Table of Contents

1.   Scope

The scope of this document is to describe the procedures of the testing process for the Bazaar Ceramics Website Project. The testing of the Bazaar Ceramics website focuses on aspects related to the user experience. This includes the Functionalities, Cross Browser Compatibility and Navigation.

Since the testing will be performed by the developer, it is classified as White Box testing and the results will be sent to the stakeholders via email.

The testing will be documented with descriptions of the processes, input/output and screenshots of the results whenever possible.

At the end of the testing, the results will be cross referenced with the requirements detailed in the Business Requirements document that will serve to provide the acceptance criteria for the project.

2.   Out of Scope

Since the tests discussed in this document will be performed directly by the developer, black box testing will be considered out of scope.

Also, tests out of scope are: Unit Testing, Stress testing, Crowd testing, User testing and Interface testing. As a principle, everything that is not included in the scope section of this document, should be considered out of scope.

3.   Assumptions

In order to correctly execute the tests identified in the scope section of this document, the following list of items is assumed to be given.

- The testing environment will be available.

- The system is fully developed.

- The Business Requirements Specification is available and describes the features to be tested.

- The database is available and populated with the test data.

- At least one customer account is available.

- At least one administrative account is available.

- The machine used for testing has at least three of the most popular web browsers installed.

- The browsers caches are clear and there are no browser extensions that may interfere.
